

District Building

DR. TINDALL, HERO; FIGHT ON THE JOB

Not His Fault There Were
No Lives to Save
From Fire.

Inspired by the heroism of Benjamin Adams, assistant assessor, and Capt. W. F. Myers, of the executive office, who recently won fame as the defenders of the women of their offices from the attacks of a ferocious mob, Dr. William Tindall, of the District of Columbia, is an aspirant also for a Carnegie medal. Pausing in the path of a mob, the doctor nearly saved from destruction an apartment house. That the lives of those residing in the building were not in imminent danger is no fault of the doctor. He was on the job if occasion demanded.

While strolling down Fifteenth street, pondering the address he will make as alternate delegate of the District of Columbia at the Chicago convention, the doctor was startled to hear a cry—startled, not alarmed. Too often has he stood in the front ranks of the lines in blue while above his head whirled the bullets of the enemy to betray emotion at the sound of the cry. Quickly looking around he observed in the door of a nearby apartment house an excited woman, who was sending forth in shrill, terror-burdened tones a cry of fire.

The doctor did not hesitate. Without thought of personal danger, he ran across the street and into the building, covering a blaze in the front room of the second story. Not for a moment did he lose his presence of mind. Quickly closing the door so as to confine the smoke and prevent a draft, he rushed down the stairs and turned in an alarm at the nearest fire station. A few minutes later the fire department was on the scene, and soon the flames were under control. Had it not been for the prompt action of the secretary to the Board of Commissioners there might have been a fearful holocaust, and the secretary would have been busily engaged for some months in answering the questions of prominent citizens as to how it could have happened under the regulations.

Dr. Tindall is a modest man, and refuses to accept the credit that is due him. But his friends know his worth.

Relics at District Building

Will Go to Auction Block

The death knell for many of the old relics of the District Building will be sounded when the new Municipal Building is occupied. Massive book cases and chairs purchased by the Board of Public Works, now bearing the marks of time, but beautiful in their design and material, are to be knocked down by the auctioneer.

In the executive office is the chair used by Governor Shepherd, which the secretary of the board refuses to part with. Among the many old pieces to be left behind are two walnut book cases in Commissioner West's office. These are beautifully designed and show little or no wear for the years they have been in service. The fact that they do not conform with the general scheme of the new furniture will make it necessary to sell them at public auction.

Golfers West and Morrow

Real Sportsmen and Love Game

No more enthusiastic golfers can be found within the District of Columbia than Commissioners West and Morrow. The Commissioners are qualifying for the Columbia golf tournament, in which Major Morrow won distinguished honors last year. Finding his official duties detaining him at his desk until 5 p. m., the major arises at that hour in the morning and by 6 is on the links. Commissioner West, who does not find the game sufficiently attractive to drag him from bed at that hour, but is generally to be found at the club house late in the afternoon. The golfing man of the week has not had a depressing effect upon Mr. West. Apparently he finds the greatest pleasure in playing in a grizzling rain.

Commissioner Macfarland, while not claiming to be an authority on golf, is quoted as saying that a rain is indicative of a spirit of true sportsmanship and to be admired.

The Commissioners' team, in the Marquette League, is doing excellent work. A large delegation of District employees are always on hand to witness the games and do much toward encouraging the players.

Bruce Aldrich, of the office of Inspector of Cemeteries and Asphalts, has been absent from the office because of illness.

A. G. Sinclair, of the Engineer Department, is confined to his home by illness.

Among the grip victims is R. Russell Graham, of the auditor's office.

A REAL SINECURE.

The most striking political sinecure in England is the property of the Marquis of Cholmondeley, lord great chamberlain to his majesty, King Edward. Only on two occasions does he have to don the robes of office—when parliament opens and those rare occasions when there is a coronation. And his salary is $2,500 a year. When the King travels the Marquis follows him, and the great chamberlain is master of ceremonies. At coronation he is the most dignified, gorgeous, and on of the titled functionaries that dance attendance upon the sovereign. He is privileged then to carry out the coronation, and after the coronation banquet he serves the King with water for his ablutions.

THE SEED CATALOGUE.

The old spring fever's back, it seems. "The catalogue now waits—A hundred pages, packed with dreams And four hundred colored plates. It tells of everything to sow And everything to plant; Just why these special seeds will grow And why those others can't. The latest Burbank miracle Is pictured for your eyes. While language almost lyrical Describes its weight and size. Bulbs, vines and bushes all are here, And fertilizers light. The diagrams are wondrous clear For planting gardens right. But one thing is left out and why I do not understand. The pages don't explain how I Can get sufficient land!"

Neighborhood Notes

Cowan Re-Elected HEAD OF CITIZENS

Congress Heights Association Discusses Local Affairs.

The Congress Heights Public Improvement Association held a meeting in the town hall on the Hamilton road last Friday evening, when, in addition to the transaction of general business, the annual election of officers took place. The following were chosen: Robert H. Cowan, president (re-elected); the Rev. William Brashaw, first vice president; Dr. Arthur N. Meloy, second vice president; Milton J. Phillips, secretary; Geo. Kennedy, treasurer (re-elected); Francis Wahler, sergeant-at-arms; J. S. Lyons, Henry M. Fadden and the Rev. William Brashaw, trustees.

The committee on the procurement of sewerage facilities for the suburb reported through Edward J. Newcomb, the chairman, that as a result of a visit to the District Building it had learned that the item of $7,000 for the construction of a sewer at Congress Heights was included in the district appropriation. Mr. Newcomb said the sewer which Congress Heights citizens have been clamoring for is to be built in the near future.

President Cowan inquired concerning the condition of the public school. Congress Heights with reference to safety from fire, and Francis Wahler stated that by Chief Belt of the District Fire Department. Mr. Newcomb stated that the building is in a splendid condition.

There was a discussion of the bill introduced in Congress providing for extension of the trolley lines from the great Heights to Shepherd's Landing, but it was reported that there is no likelihood of this bill becoming a law at this time. President Cowan appointed a committee to prepare for the entertainment of a number of guests at the next meeting.

"They're murdering a policeman up on the Good Hope road."

This message was received over the telephone at the Anacostia police station Saturday night. The patrol wagon was ordered out and all the station reserves, in charge of Lieutenant Anderson, were sent to the scene. The situation was not so bad as the message indicated. Policeman Eskridge had attempted to arrest Allen Simms, colored, for disorderly conduct, and Allen had taken offense. The colored man is of powerful physique and fought strenuously before the reserves arrived and took the prisoner. A charge of assault was placed against Simms.

The Sodality of the Children of Mary of St. Theresa's parish held its annual election of officers Sunday afternoon in the church hall at Washington and Fillmore streets. The following were elected: Miss Addie Watson, president; Miss Alice Green, first assistant; Miss Mabel Brauman, second assistant; Miss Agnes Wathen, secretary; Miss Lillian Lawrence, treasurer; Miss Irene Knott, Estelle Lathford, Irene Miel, and Helen Hoye, consultants. Preparations were made for the annual May procession of the church in which the society will have a prominent part. The president, Miss Wathen having the post of May queen. The procession will be held in the latter part of the month. It was announced that May devotions will be held in the church on Wednesday and Friday evenings at 7:30 o'clock.

A meeting of women interested in work of a patriotic character was held at the home of Mrs. Anna C. Quinn, Jefferson street, when a girls' brigade was formed, the purpose being to carry on work along patriotic lines. Mrs. A. B. Frisbie, president of the John A. Logan Women's Club, presided. The officers elected were: Mrs. A. B. Frisbie, president; Mrs. John A. Logan, first assistant; Mrs. John A. Logan, second assistant; Mrs. John A. Logan, secretary; Mrs. John A. Logan, treasurer; Mrs. John A. Logan, consultants. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. John A. Logan, Jefferson street.

Lallier Hamilton, employed as an attendant at the Government Hospital for the insane, was returning to the institution on Saturday afternoon, when he was stopped by a patrolman. He was about to alight from the car he discovered that some one had removed his suitcase and had left in its place an article of clothing. He was arrested and taken to the police station, where he was held for a few days.

At a meeting of Electa Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, held last Tuesday evening in the Masonic Hall in Anacostia, a large delegation of District employees were present. The chapter was entertained by Miss Carrie Smith, the worthy matron of Electa Chapter, welcomed the visitors. Charles F. Roberts sang several baritone solos. Miss Edith M. Pyles played a piano solo. Mrs. Frances Newman gave a recitation, and Mrs. Ella Balderston recited.

Colored Baptists from the city gathered in force at noon Sunday at the river side in Anacostia, where baptismal services were publicly conducted under the auspices of the Israel Baptist Church, Eleventh street northeast. Several hundred spectators lined the shore and witnessed the services, many of them taking part in the singing. The Rev. John H. Burke, the pastor of the church, officiated, baptizing nine converts, six of whom were women.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the German Reformed Protestant Church held its annual foreign praise service last Sunday evening. Mrs. George M. Summons, the president of the society, presided. Mrs. Charles Johnson, former missionary in Shanghai, China, described some of the work in that country. A collection was taken up for the famine orphans in India.

The funeral of Martin Carmody, a venerable citizen of the District, was held at 9 o'clock last Saturday morning from his home, 439 Jackson street, Anacostia, mass being celebrated in St. Theresa's Catholic Church. Mr. Carmody was a veteran soldier and the interment was in Arlington.

Frederick Charles Bennett, a druggist in Anacostia, died Friday at the home of his uncle, Bernard W. Burdine, 330 Jefferson street. He was a native of England, but had resided in the District for many years. His funeral took place from Emmanuel Episcopal Church at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning. Interment was made in Congressional Cemetery.

Falls Church

STATION GROUNDS TO BE IMPROVED

Village Association Also Appropriates Money for Street Crossings.

The monthly meeting of the Village Improvement Society was held Monday night at the Presbyterian manse.

The committee on beautifying the grounds around East End station was instructed to spend $50 and the committee on purchase of stone for street crossings was instructed to spend $55.

After the business session of the society, those present were entertained with songs by the quartet and solos by Miss Emma Seaman and Mrs. H. S. Ryer. The Rev. D. H. Kiddle gave several humorous recitations, which were enjoyed by all.

Royal Helpers' Circle, Kings' Daughters, of the Presbyterian church, held a sale of needlework, candy, and teas Thursday afternoon. The affair was largely attended and a handsome sum realized.

Dr. Finley Brown and family, of Goode, Va., moved into the Mount Airy house, on Maple avenue, this week. Dr. Brown will practice medicine in Falls Church.

Mrs. Seaman, who has been visiting New York, has returned to her West Falls Church home.

Mrs. E. C. Hendrick, of Washington, has moved to her summer home, on Washington street.

Maurice D. DePutron, son of Mrs. Mary E. DePutron, of West Falls Church, who went to Panama in November, 1904, has been appointed assistant to the chairman and chief engineer of the Panama Canal Commission.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Baptist church spent a delightful afternoon with Mrs. Van Quirk, on Great Falls street, Thursday.

M. E. Church has sold for Mrs. Mary Harrison the house and two acres of land to Frederick Grant of Chicago.

Mrs. Barthe is again occupying her Falls Church home, after a winter spent in Washington.

M. T. Rust will soon begin the erection of a $5,000-house in West Falls Church.

M. E. Church has sold to Adm. P. M. Rixey about sixty acres of land belonging to Judge A. A. Freeman, known as the "Freeman home."

Dr. G. T. Mankin has resigned as clerk and member of the school board of Falls Church.

Rev. and Mrs. J. E. Ames are attending the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, which is being held in Baltimore this week.

Miss Mildred Tucker, of Washington, was the guest of the Misses Say this week.

Miss Alma Berry is building a house on her lot near West Falls Church.

Mrs. Anna Denny and her son, John Denny, of Baltimore, and Miss Anna Lyell, of Camden, N. J., are guests of Mrs. W. S. O. Thomas.

Pioneer Lodge of Good Templars met Tuesday night at the residence of W. T. Sprangle. J. H. Marr, deputy grand chief templar, presided. The officers who were elected at the previous meeting. He was assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Sprangle. The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss Goldie Elliott Tuesday night.

A men's club has been organized at the Presbyterian Church. The officers are: Harry Demore, president; E. C. Hough, vice president; George W. Hawhurst, secretary, and A. M. Smith, treasurer.

The Home Mission Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church South met at the parsonage Thursday afternoon. After the business meeting a most delightful social hour was spent and refreshments were served by the ladies.

Officers were elected by the Presbyterian Sunday School last Sunday. E. E. Hough was re-elected superintendent and the others are: A. M. Smith, assistant; Alan Garner, secretary; G. W. Hawhurst, treasurer; Miss Margaret Loving, assistant treasurer; Miss Hazel Newell, librarian; Miss Grace Thompson, assistant librarian; Mrs. F. M. Thompson, pianist.

The Congregational Church was filled last Sunday night with a large congregation. The people were interested in the reports from their representatives who attended the State Sunday school convention at Roanoke. Miss Grace Thompson, Miss Kennedy, the Rev. W. S. O. Thomas, Miss Pearl Luttrell, Miss Nourse, and A. M. Smith spoke.

CATACT EFFECTUAL AGAINST MOSQUITOES

United States Consul Bishop, at Palermo, Italy, reports some experiments made by the chief of the sanitary service at Gaboon, French Africa, with the cactus as a substitute for petroleum for the extermination of mosquitoes in warm climates. "The thick, pulpy leaves of the cactus," he says, "cut up in pieces, are thrown into water and macerated until a sticky paste is formed. This paste is spread upon the surface of stagnant water and forms an isolating layer which prevents the larva of the mosquitoes from coming to the top to breathe and destroys them through asphyxiation. It is true that in warm climates petroleum evaporates so quickly, and is thus of little avail. The mucilaginous cactus, paste, on the contrary, can hold its place indefinitely, lasting weeks, months or even an entire year, and the period of development of the larva being only about a fortnight, it has the most thorough effect."

REPLY IN FULL.

A member of an eminent St. Louis law firm went to Chicago to consult a client. When he arrived he found that he had unaccountably forgotten the client's name. He telephoned his partner: "What is our client's name?" The answer read: "Brown, Walter E. Yours is Allen, William B."—Exchange.

Rockville

SPENCER C. JONES BACK FROM SOUTH

ROCKVILLE, Md., May 9.—Spencer C. Jones, president of the Montgomery County National Bank, who spent the winter with his daughter, Mrs. Bessie Falvey, in New Orleans, has returned to his home in this place.

Mrs. Seth W. Griffith, of Richmond, is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Joseph J. Hutton, of Olney district.

Clark Brown, of the Brookeville neighborhood, having recovered from his recent illness, has returned to his studies at St. John's College, Annapolis.

Amos F. Hutchins, of Barstow, Calvert county, was the recent guest of friends in this section.

Miss Susie Riggs, of Brookeville, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Marshall P. Howard, in Baltimore.

Miss Effie Kelsor, of Washington, was the guest of friends in Rockville this week.

The Ladies' Aid Society, of the Baptist church at Rockville, will give a meat and kitchen supper at the town hall on Wednesday, May 13, the proceeds to be used for the benefit of the new church.

Mrs. Lucy Snowden Lea and Mr. William Moore, who surprised their friends by getting married in Philadelphia ten days ago, have returned from their wedding trip and taken up their residence at Ashton, this county. Mr. Moore is a brother of former State Senator Joseph Moore of Sandy Spring, and the bride is of Prince George county.

Edwin C. Brandenburg, of Washington, has purchased a handsome vacant site at Montrose, three miles south of Rockville, and will erect a fine residence upon it, which he will occupy as his family home.

Mrs. Harry Stratmeyer, of Rockville, is visiting friends in Washington.

The newly elected town council of Rockville met on Wednesday evening and organized. John J. Higgins was elected town clerk, William F. Disney, superintendent of electric lights and water works, and Aaron R. Hewitt, bailiff.

Miss Teresa O'Donnell, of Washington, was the guest of Rockville friends during the early part of the week.

Brookland

MISS LOUISE GOVE ENTERTAINS CLUB

The Young People's Card Club was entertained by Miss Louise Gove, of Brookland and Newton streets, last Wednesday evening.

Mrs. David Cheesman, of Newton street, entertained the Girls' Friendly Society last Friday evening.

The A. R. C. Club will be entertained by Miss Louise Claggett, of Sixteenth and Kearney streets, next Thursday evening.

A surprise party was given Miss Jessie Hess, of Frankfort street, Tuesday evening by some of her Brookland friends.

Delzean Marcan, of Ninth and Monroe streets, has returned from a visit to friends in Virginia.

The Rev. Mr. Millington and his son, Tale, have returned from New York.

William Jackson and family, of Thirtieth street, expect to make their home in Izard, D. C., to be near Mr. Jackson's place of employment.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. Watson, of Two street, will move to Hyattsville this week.

Mr. William Webber, of Baltimore, Md., was the guest of his sister, Mrs. Jeger, of Ninth street, last Sunday.

The many friends of Henry Edmonds, of Newton street, will be glad to learn that he is convalescing.

ANCIENT MEXICO

FULL OF INTEREST

There is no country better worth visiting than Mexico. It is striking, in passing the border from the United States, to note how completely everything changes. Here there hardly anything man has constructed which harmonizes with its surroundings; there everything seems to be entirely a part of the country. It is more foreign than Europe is now, and constantly reminds one of the East. Riding in some of the state-traveling districts, I could hardly believe that I was not in India. The dust in the road, the thorn scrub on both sides, with that pungent smell of the blossoms, all reminded me of the country about Ahmedabad. The plateau in winter, the dry season, is very much like the desert—long stretches of country, with purple mountains in the distance, without a tree in sight except a few cacti. The soil is very fertile and has kept a little green and a few trees have been planted. Often the horizon is so distant that the mountains seem to be in the sky, and perhaps one catches a glimpse of the snow on one of the volcanoes. The color is that of a new Mexican opal—greens, blues, and reds.

Everywhere the distinctive features are the churches and tiled domes rising above the towns. The exteriors of these churches are always picturesque and interesting; but the interiors are usually disappointing, for they have suffered much during many revolutions, and perhaps even more from senseless removals. There are few still untouched, where one can see them as they were once, entirely covered with richly carved wood heavily gilded. Gold was used thickly everywhere, till the carving looked like solid metal. I have seen much gold in churches, but none to equal that in Mexico—Century.

ARCHITECT'S SHOW

MAN DRAWINGS

Hemicycle of Corcoran Gallery Filled With Pleasing Subjects.

In the hemicycle of the Corcoran Gallery of Art, the members of the Washington Architectural Club are exhibiting one of the most excellent collections of drawings, photographs, and models relating to architecture ever placed on exhibition in this city.

The problem of arranging a greater number of exhibits than the space in the hemicycle would easily admit is one of the obstacles with which this society has struggled in vain to overcome. Overcrowding could not be avoided and a much larger wall space could have been comfortably filled.

In an exhibition of this character public buildings necessarily occupy a prominent part. Among the public buildings under the charge of the supervising architect of the Treasury Department, may be found drawings of a number of postoffices for different cities in the United States. In this branch the Government has the opportunity of performing a valuable national service. The buildings erected in the smaller cities are often accepted, whether wisely or foolishly, as standards of architectural excellence, and from these standards the architecture of the city is molded and developed.

It is therefore, important that, hand in hand with the uses for which the structure is erected, the architectural quality should be such that it will point the difference architecturally between the architecture of the "crazy quack" pattern, and the architecture of the "crazy quack" pattern, and the architecture of the "crazy quack" pattern.

Public Buildings.

Among the drawings from the office of the supervising architect of the Treasury, the drawing of the administration building for the Reform School of the District is one of local interest, not so much on account of the purposes of the building, but for the reason that it is one of the new buildings in course of construction in the District.

Among the more expensive postoffices to be erected, the postoffice in the material of design and construction, in this as in some other instances, the design was selected through the means of a competition, and the winning architects, Messrs. Wood, Donn & Deming, have been given the honor place in the exhibition.

The accepted design is one of classic architecture, an arrangement which not only meets the demands of the service for which this building is intended, but also marks a vast improvement in the drawing of a postoffice building, since the erection of the former postoffice in New York.

In the drawings of public buildings, the drawings of the new National Museum of which Hornblower & Marshall, of this city, are the architects, should be sufficient evidence in support of the claim that this city is the home of the leading architects of the country. These drawings and the drawings of the Union Trust building, located at the corner of Fifteenth and H streets, which Wood, Donn & Deming, a local firm, are the architects, have been given the honor place in the exhibition.

It is true that there may be seen among this collection two portraits of children, which by their excellence are of a quality on account of their artistic quality, but it is a regret that the members of the society have been so careless in learning and this in a locality where photography by nature if the camerists would only become accustomed to seeing the beautiful, and passing the commonplace.

Miss Clara Barrett Strait, a pupil of the Corcoran Art School, is completing a second portrait of Senator Tillman. This portrait, when completed, will be presented to Clemson College of South Carolina, an institution in which Senator Tillman has been greatly interested for some time.

It is true that in some particulars the collection is a formal one, but the same artist, painted for the Winslow Normal and Industrial College, an institution for girls, in which Senator is also deeply interested, the later portrait, the artist has varied his style, and the left arm and hand, and some minor changes have been made in the accessories. One cannot overlook the evident sincerity of purpose, and the care with which these portraits have been handled.

It may be said that the artist has painted a successful number of portraits of the same artist, but the artist has presented a studious, serious person, the most conspicuous picture in the collection, the portraits are pleasing and the purpose for which they have been painted, and the limited opportunity for sittings, the young artist has performed a difficult task in an easy and pleasant manner. Miss Strait returned from her home in Lancaster, S. C.

In the twelfth annual exhibition at the Carnegie Institute, now in progress in Pittsburgh, the unique feature of this collection of pictures is the collection of the works of Winslow Homer, which have been loaned for this exhibition by the Corcoran Gallery of Art. This is the first serious attempt to assemble from all of the possible sources the works of this conspicuous American painter.

Twenty-two canvases have been collected, and the number give to the public a proper estimate of the power of this artist, who has created his own style of work, and has followed his own chosen path in the interpretation of nature. Notwithstanding thorough independence in the style of his work, he has never been misunderstood.

The story of his canvases is written in his own hand, and is never seen in a more complete manner. The collection is included one of his works, "High Cliff," belonging to the Evans collection in the National Gallery.

From an exchange comes the information that Duncan B. Harding, a portrait painter now in Paris, and native of Raleigh, N. C. has decided to return to his native country, and establish a studio in this city. Mr. Harding has recently painted a portrait of the Rev. William E. Pell, a prominent minister and man of affairs in Raleigh, and the portrait has been publicly presented to the State Library.

An Idealized Avenue.

One of the most conspicuous drawings, in size, on that last wall of the hemicycle, is a suggested improvement of the south side of Pennsylvania avenue from the Capitol to the Washington Monument. This drawing does not follow the suggestions of the Park Commission of 1902, but seems to be in line with the suggestions of Senator Heyburn of the Senate Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds. The drawings were prepared by Messrs. Venderhorst & the office of the supervising architect of the Treasury.

Prominent among the purely decorative designs is the sketch by F. D. Millet for the large ceiling decoration for the United States custom house of Baltimore. This sketch is a marine subject, illustrating the coming to port of a fleet of vessels, types of the merchant marine vessels of different designs and periods.

The exhibition will continue until May 22, and will be open to the public during the customary hours of admission to the Corcoran Gallery.

LANDSCAPES SHOW

BY CAMERA CLUB

Akron Exhibit Falls Below Standard of Others.

In the latest exhibition of photography at the Capital Camera Club, the work of the Akron Camera Club seems to fall below the standard of the circulating exhibitions with which the local society has been favored during this season. In other exhibitions there has been noted the influence of prominent photographic workers, who have to a large extent created a school of their own, and who have proved themselves to be leaders in their own circle. With the Akron Camera Club there is a noticeable absence of leadership and a lamentable lack of purposeful work. The exhibition of thirty-seven photographs is confined almost entirely to landscape work, a branch of photography in which there is abundant opportunity when guided by wise selection for the production of work of an attractive pictorial work. In this direction, that of selection, the Akron Camera Club has failed to appreciate its opportunity.

Landscapes Are Small.

The landscapes presented are unfortunately of small size. It is not by this criticism intended to establish a standard of size as a standard of excellence. There is but little to do with actual merit, and to pointing out the smallness of the photographs, however, small they may be, is to have about it some evident purpose. To merely copy a landscape is not copying, nor creating or idealizing. To be a realist may have the commendable quality of truth, but all illustrative truth is not exhibiting.

To present for exhibition a commonplace landscape with a monotonous, unreal sky is only partial realism, for the sky has color and atmospheric quality, even though it be represented in monochrome. To picture a snowscape with an expanse of snow as white as the whitest paper is not even faithful copying, for the snow, if there are shadows, does not in nature represent a cast iron enameled surface.

Cloudless skies, represented by white paper, or what is at times worse by blue tinted to an unnatural tone value; unattractive landscapes made at unreasonable conditions of light, where the rendering often faulty, these seem to be the strongest characteristics of the exhibition from Akron.

It is true that there may be seen among this collection two portraits of children, which by their excellence are of a quality on account of their artistic quality, but it is a regret that the members of the society have been so careless in learning and this in a locality where photography by nature if the camerists would only become accustomed to seeing the beautiful, and passing the commonplace.

Miss Clara Barrett Strait, a pupil of the Corcoran Art School, is completing a second portrait of Senator Tillman. This portrait, when completed, will be presented to Clemson College of South Carolina, an institution in which Senator Tillman has been greatly interested for some time.

It is true that in some particulars the collection is a formal one, but the same artist, painted for the Winslow Normal and Industrial College, an institution for girls, in which Senator is also deeply interested, the later portrait, the artist has varied his style, and the left arm and hand, and some minor changes have been made in the accessories. One cannot overlook the evident sincerity of purpose, and the care with which these portraits have been handled.

It may be said that the artist has painted a successful number of portraits of the same artist, but the artist has presented a studious, serious person, the most conspicuous picture in the collection, the portraits are pleasing and the purpose for which they have been painted, and the limited opportunity for sittings, the young artist has performed a difficult task in an easy and pleasant manner. Miss Strait returned from her home in Lancaster, S. C.

In the twelfth annual exhibition at the Carnegie Institute, now in progress in Pittsburgh, the unique feature of this collection of pictures is the collection of the works of Winslow Homer, which have been loaned for this exhibition by the Corcoran Gallery of Art. This is the first serious attempt to assemble from all of the possible sources the works of this conspicuous American painter.

Twenty-two canvases have been collected, and the number give to the public a proper estimate of the power of this artist, who has created his own style of work, and has followed his own chosen path in the interpretation of nature. Notwithstanding thorough independence in the style of his work, he has never been misunderstood.

The story of his canvases is written in his own hand, and is never seen in a more complete manner. The collection is included one of his works, "High Cliff," belonging to the Evans collection in the National Gallery.

From an exchange comes the information that Duncan B. Harding, a portrait painter now in Paris, and native of Raleigh, N. C. has decided to return to his native country, and establish a studio in this city. Mr. Harding has recently painted a portrait of the Rev. William E. Pell, a prominent minister and man of affairs in Raleigh, and the portrait has been publicly presented to the State Library.

HINDOO GODS.

The theology of the Hindoos is simply a mystery to the Occidental intelligence. They believe in a million gods, and in as many "heils" and "heavens." The wild labyrinth of ideas going to the making of the Brahmic faith is quite beyond the ability of a white person to follow. The thought of it is bewildering, and once in the midst of it you could no more get out of it than a six-month-old baby could get out of an Amazonian forest.

IN LABOR WORLD

MEMORIAL TODAY

IN TYPO TEMPLE